Benefits Expressed by Stakeholders in Wisconsin

Shared Benefits

- Electronics Recycling Legislation immediately develops a broader infrastructure to meet the projected e-recycling demand from households in the aftermath of the digital television transition.

Stakeholder- Specific Benefits

- Municipalities and citizens benefit by reduced (or possibly eliminated) taxpayer burden of managing retired electronics.
- Business and institutions appreciate the long-term reduction in responsible recycling costs (as an infrastructure grows to meet increased demands for recycling) with no additional regulatory burden on them.
- Processors like the additional volume they will be able to manage.
- State and local governments benefit from the increased tax revenue generated by these growing businesses.
- Manufacturers support the market-based legislation because it offers them flexibility while harmonizing with the rules of many other states with similar laws.
- Our environment benefits from the reduced demand on landfills and a reduction in the need for virgin resources.
